

Have you ever seen someone in your neighborhood, and thought, “That person doesn’t belong here...”? Have you thought about calling the police to investigate? Were you unsure if it would be appropriate to call? Well, Crime Cat is here to help.

Examples of when not to call:

- You see someone you don’t recognize
- Someone seems “suspicious” based solely on their appearance
- You have a bad feeling, but no evidence of wrongdoing

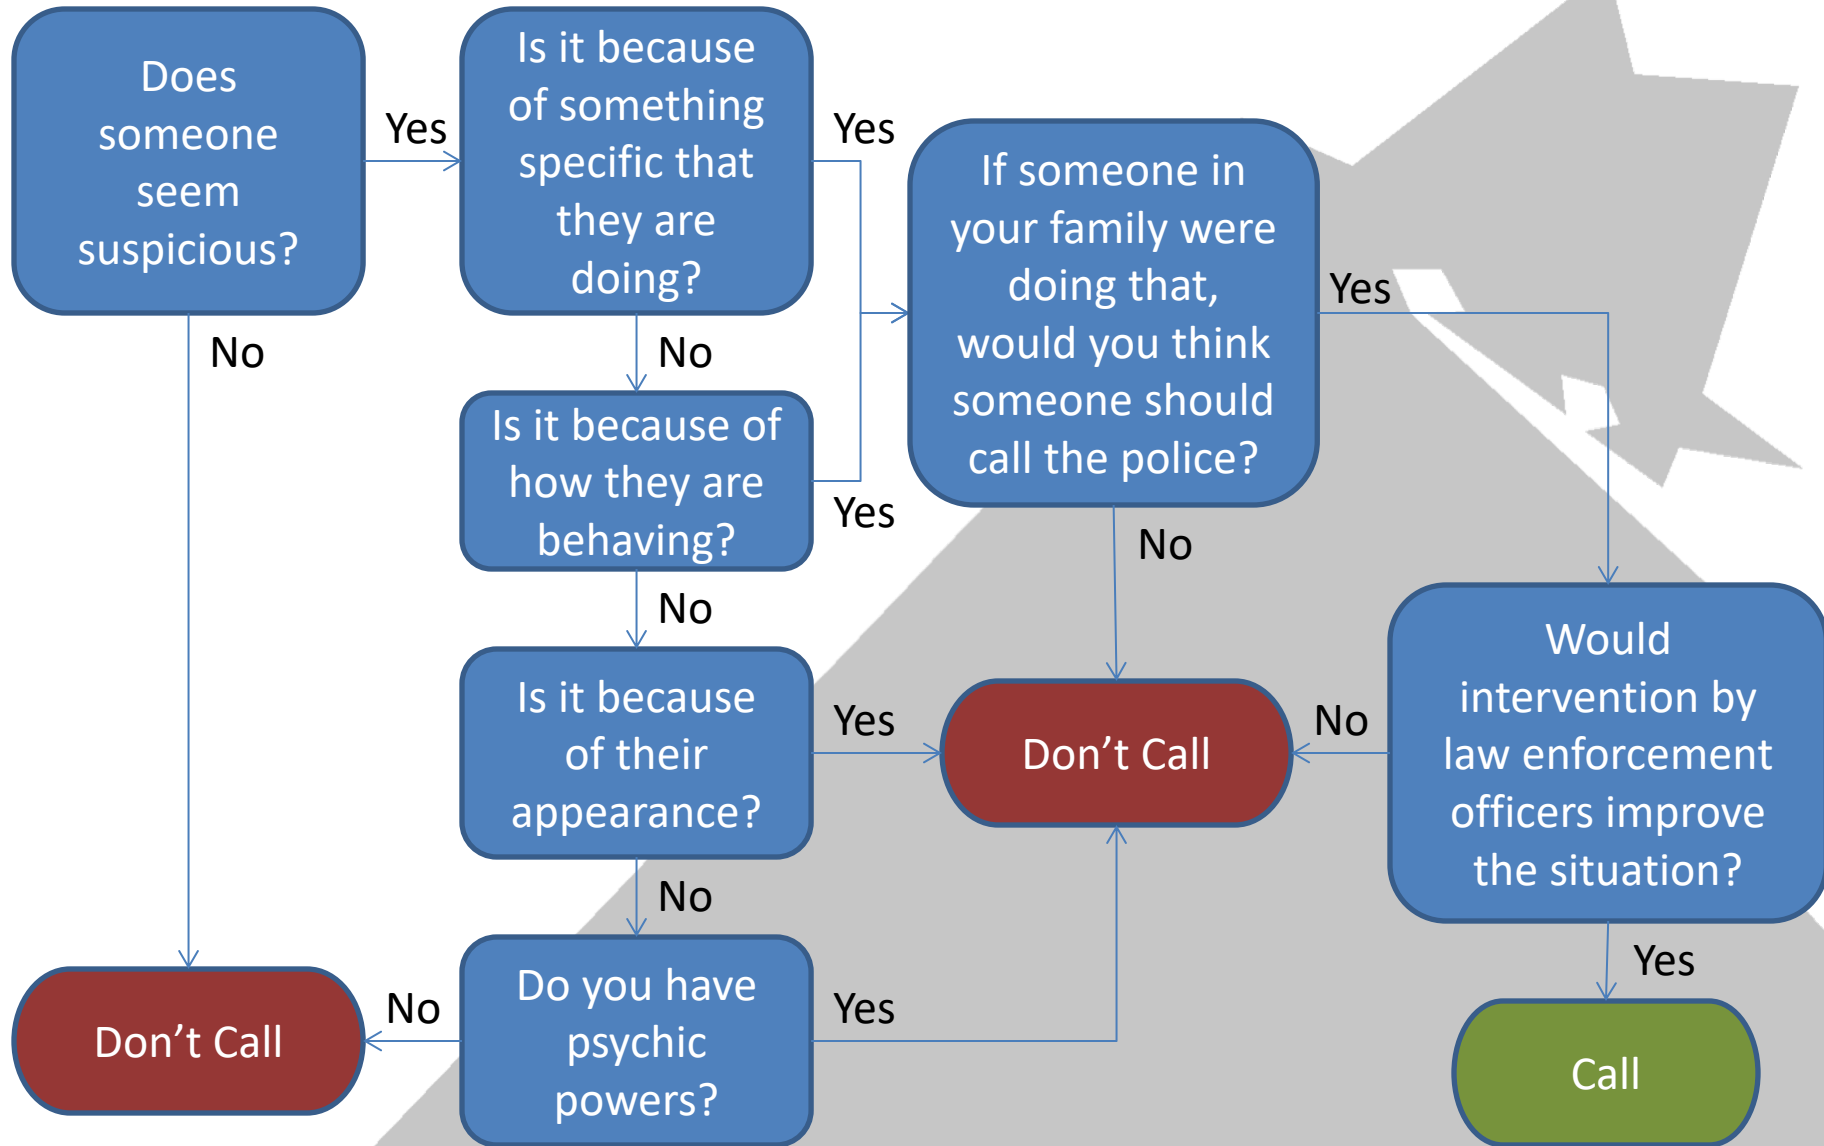

Examples of when to call:

- A crime has occurred
- Someone is in imminent danger or needs help
- You have been in or witnessed an accident
- You see evidence of wrongdoing

If you call, you will be asked about the specific behavior that concerns you. But officers in our neighborhood typically respond to all calls, so, before traumatizing an innocent neighbor or guest, please carefully consider the reason for your suspicions.
