

THE CONVERSATION

Media Kit

2026 New Zealand

The world's leading publisher of research-based news and analysis.

About The Conversation

The Conversation is the world's leading publisher of research-based news and analysis.

A unique collaboration between academics and journalists.

Free to read.

Free to republish.

THE CONVERSATION

<https://theconversation.com/au>

We place a high value on trust.

Everything you read on The Conversation is backed by science and research from academics who work together with our team of editors. This collaboration turns academics' knowledge and insights into easy-to-read articles, making them accessible to the wider public.

The Conversation began in Melbourne, Australia, in March 2011. The UK edition launched in May 2013, followed by editions in the US (2014), South Africa and France (2015), Canada, Indonesia and New Zealand (2017), Spain (2018), and Brasil (2023).

Our Audience

Analysts
CEOs
Consultants
Directors
Editors
Engineers
Executives
Journalists
Lecturers
Managers
Nurses
Policy Officers
Politicians
Professors
Project Officers
Researchers
Teachers
Scientists
Writers

Our Audience

Our readers come to us for information they can trust and to read fresh, new perspectives not available elsewhere. The Conversation is seen to hold a unique place and a vital role in Australian media as an evidence-based news source.

Our readers work in:

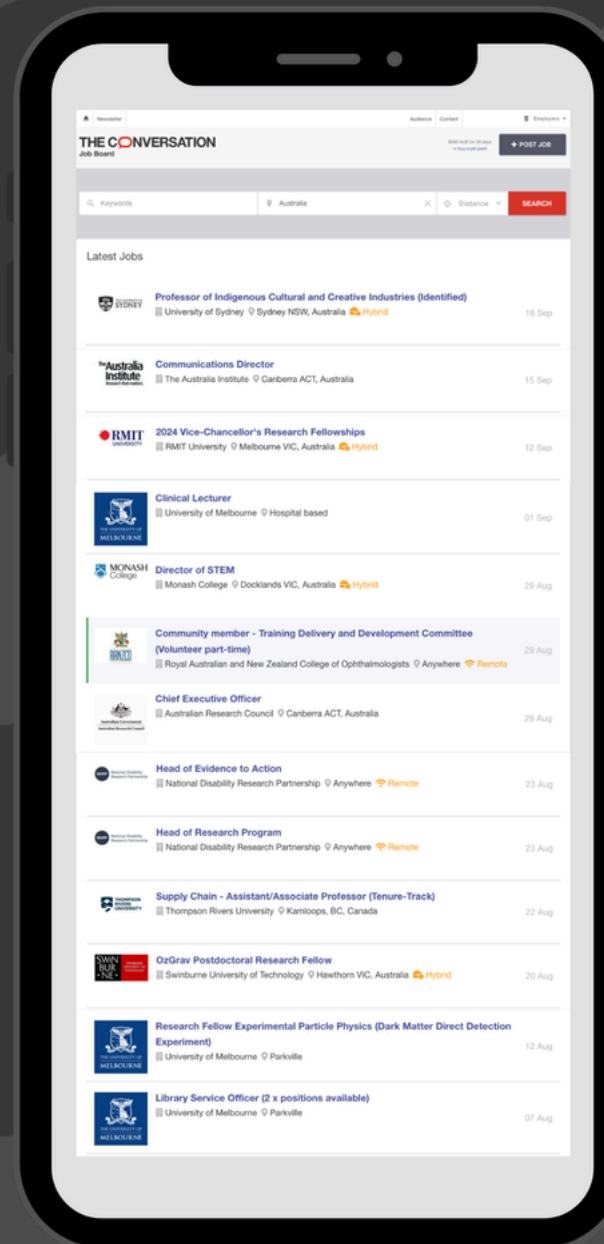

Reach Our Audience in 3 Ways

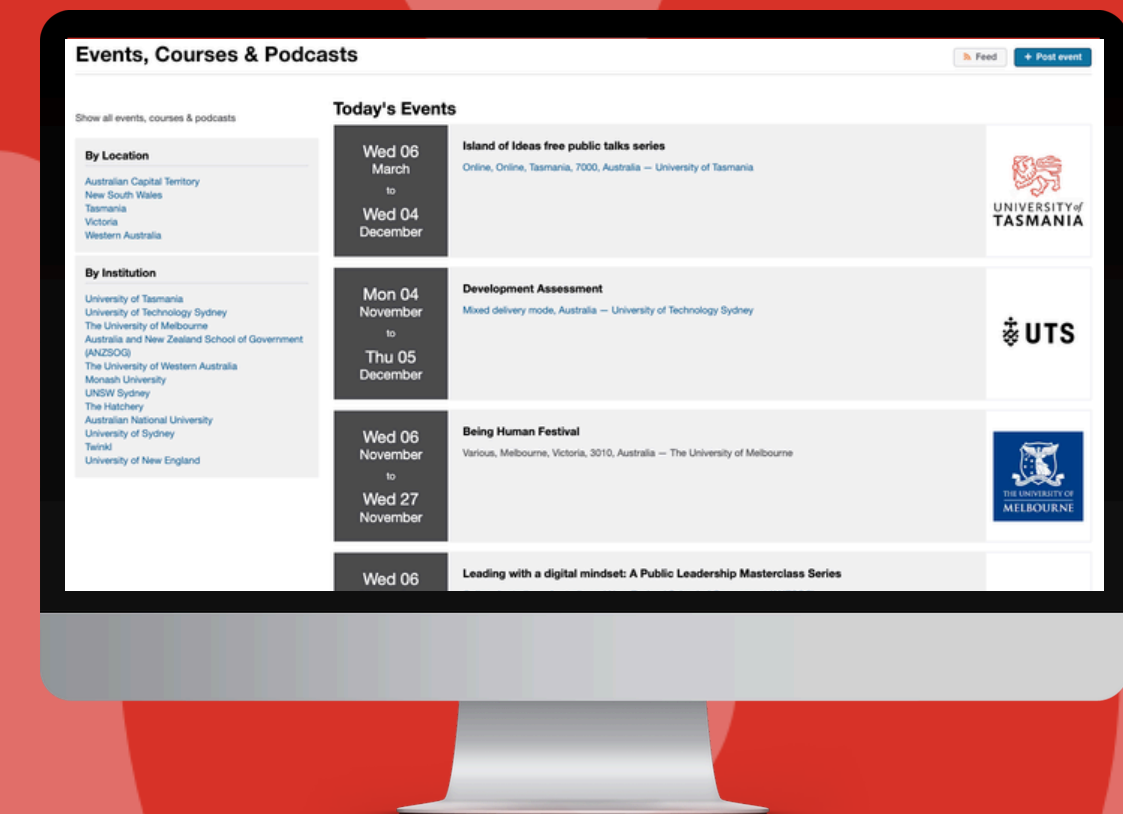

Sponsor our Newsletters

Advertise Jobs

Event, Course & Podcast listings

Our Newsletters

204K
People
subscribed

View in browser

THE CONVERSATION

There's a lot of focus on the need to provide better sex education for children and teens about consent, respectful relationships and anatomy. Even the federal government acknowledges we must do better. But there are some alarming gaps in their basic biological knowledge by a new study that surveyed Western Australian teenage girls about their knowledge of ovulation, menstruation and anatomy. Almost half of respondents didn't know that day one of the menstrual cycle is the first day of menstruation. Fewer than 9% understood ovulation happens about two weeks before their period. More than 60% confused the vulva with the vagina. The study's authors, led by Felicity Roux, warn: "If patients cannot answer doctors' basic questions, such as 'when was your last period?' or 'where is this happening in your body?', it could impact diagnoses and treatments. It also means they may not even go to a doctor, dismissing debilitating pain or heavy bleeding as 'normal'."

Judith Ireland
Education Editor

Today's newsletter supported by The Hatchery

The Daily

219K
People
subscribed

View in browser

THE CONVERSATION

NAIDOC Week concludes this weekend, and the area celebrating local Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander culture. Laura Case and Amanda Harris have written a lovely piece about the origins of NAIDOC Week in the late 1950s, and how it has always been central to the celebrations. They take a look at the performances that took place at Sydney's Martin Place from 1959, and the talent quest which followed from 1961. Big-name country singers like Jimmy Little and Candy Williams were joined by "gumleaf players, guitars, piano accordions and homemade instruments including one constructed from an 'oil drum, broom handle and two strings'", they write. The stage was a place for sharing of culture, and for building networks and community – much like the performances at NAIDOC Week today. As Laura and Amanda write, "the history of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people transforming a day of mourning born out of protest into a week of cultural celebration brings home the ongoing relevance of NAIDOC." If you're not able to get to any performances or events this weekend, there is also the opportunity to acknowledge NAIDOC Week at home with your family. Emerson Zerafa-Payne has compiled a lovely list of First Nations picture books to read with your children, this week and throughout the year. The list includes a beautiful explainer on Welcome to Country, as well as wonderful adventure stories that all children will find a connection to. And finally, Stephanie Beaupark and Aneshka Mora have taken a look at a unique program at Wollongong Regional Art Gallery, HERE+NOW, which is working to give opportunities to First Nations and culturally diverse emerging curators and artists. The authors detail what this exhibition is trying to change in the art industry – and what your local galleries might be able to do to become more culturally inclusive.

Jane Howard
Arts + Culture Editor

Today's newsletter supported by Byron Writers Festival

The Weekender

62K
People
subscribed

View in browser

Science

THE CONVERSATION

Billions of corals have perished due to climate change and the warmer seas it has caused. The damage – often seen as coral bleaching – is devastating, and has fundamentally changed coral reefs, including Australia's Great Barrier Reef. You may have heard of expensive proposed solutions that involve transplanting baby corals from the lab or selectively breeding them to resist heat. But a new report argues there's little evidence these measures will help in the long term. What must we do instead? Unsurprisingly, it's climate action. Another study this week has opened a different can of worms, to do with human history. We have no written evidence from the Bronze Age in Europe, but for years archaeologists have been finding hoards of buried metalwork – tools, bits and pieces, broken bracelets. It's unclear why people did this. A new study suggests it may have had something to do with developing a currency. But this opens up arguments about the nature of money. Closer to home, have you noticed that increasing numbers of shipwrecks have been found in Australia in recent years? It's no coincidence. Researchers who work aboard Australia's national science ship, RV Investigator, have been piggybacking shipwreck investigations onto the research voyages – and the ship is equipped with the perfect tools for the job. Technology – specifically machine learning, a branch of artificial intelligence – is also making waves in weather forecasting and climate predictions. Of course, climate researchers and meteorologists already use sophisticated computer models in their work: Earth is a huge place enveloped in complex systems. But a new model called NeuralQCM has achieved results comparable with best existing models, at a fraction of the computing power. With data centres guzzling up increasingly unsustainable levels of electricity, efficiency is a good thing. P.S. If you're up for some stargazing, two meteor showers are peaking tonight! Until next week.

Signe Dean
Science + Technology Editor

Science

46K
People
subscribed

View in browser

Books & Ideas

THE CONVERSATION

If you need proof that books and bookmakers are strange bedfellows, look no further than this year's Nobel Prize for Literature. The bookies' odds this week featured a grab-bag of literary greats: Haruki Murakami, Thomas Pynchon, Margaret Atwood, Anne Carson, with Chinese author Can Xue the firm favourite, narrowly ahead of Australia's Gerald Murnane. The odds on South Korean author Han Kang winning were a modest 33/1. Kang, 53, only the 18th woman awarded the prize, was hailed by the Nobel committee for her "intense, poetic prose that confronts historical traumas and exposes the fragility of life". Six of Kang's books are available in English translation. They include The Vegetarian, winner of the 2016 International Booker Prize; Human Acts, a fictionalised account of a massacre that took place in Gwangju, Kang's birthplace; The White Book, a poetic, autobiographical reflection on loss; and the 2011 novel Greek Lessons. Her Nobel Prize, writes Valentina Gosetti, is richly deserved. Where to begin for those new to Kang's writing? My colleague James Ley, who recently wrote on her work, says, "I have particular fondness for Greek Lessons, which is a very precise, very concentrated poetic exploration of the limits of language and philosophy, and the way they break down when faced with the problem of trying to articulate the human condition." This week I'm reading Rachel Kushner's Booker Prize shortlisted novel, Creation Lake, narrated by an enjoyably spiky and deceitful female spy. After that, I'll delve into Kang's The White Book, which sounds mesmerising.

Suzy Freeman-Greene
Books + Ideas Editor

Today's newsletter supported by University of Queensland Press (UQP)

Books & Ideas

20K
People
subscribed

View in browser

THE CONVERSATION

Nau mai, haere mai. The recent revelation that companies and shareholders of the government's fast-track projects gave more than $500,000 to the Electoral Act and New Zealand First raises inevitable questions about political donations. As former prime minister Helen Clark added on social media: "That may underestimate given the lack of transparency around electoral donations in NZ." And it's not only a lack of transparency – the actual laws governing political party donations are overly complex and seemingly full of loopholes. There have been various proposals for reform, but the parties themselves are far from united on the issue. The voting public, on the other hand, seem to favour an overhaul of the rules, according to results from the New Zealand Election Study outlined here today. As Mona Kreweil and Jack Vowles write, "public perceptions of undue influence by donors are widespread". "While these perceptions are strongest on the left," they explain, "they also penetrate deeply into groups who vote for the parties on the right, and into the business community." And while perception might not be reality, in politics the two are inextricably bound up. Reform is surely overdue. One more thing – every year we ask our readers to complete our reader survey. Tell us what you like about The Conversation and what we could be doing better. We'd love to hear from you and it only takes ten minutes, thank you.

Finlay Macdonald
New Zealand Editor

Today's newsletter supported by The Conversation

New Zealand

View all newsletters here

NZ Weekly Newsletter

Our weekly newsletter (Wednesday) has an average open rate of 51.3% - nearly double the industry rate that Campaign Monitor reports for newsletters in general (21.5%) and more than double for Media (23.9%).

Our click rate is also very high on links and articles in the newsletter – 10.2% compared to the industry rate of 2.3%.

What you get by becoming a sponsor:

Two large click-through banners showcased in ad spots at the top and bottom of our newsletter. Your organisation is credited as the sponsor of the newsletter.

A post-campaign performance report (upon request).

The screenshot displays the newsletter's content, including an article titled "THE CONVERSATION" by Finlay Macdonald, a job listing for the University of Sydney, and a banner for the NZ International Science Festival. Three performance metrics are overlaid on the image:

- 51.3% Open rate (Red circle)
- 20K People subscribed (Dark grey circle)
- 10.2% Click rate (Light grey circle)

Additional visible text in the newsletter includes: "Nau mai, haere mai.", "Next year's general election will mark 30 years since New Zealand moved to MMP...", "But something odd has been happening, too. Despite the MMP system being the result of widespread disaffection with the binary politics of the past, a new binary politics has emerged.", "As Richard Shaw argues, with so many parties now 'ruling out' various other parties, parliament has settled into two distinct blocs: Labour/Green/Te Pāti Māori on one side, National/ACT/NZ First on the other – that largely mimic the 'ideological forced choice' that prompted change in the first place.", "With the minor parties able to exercise considerable influence over their bigger partners, and the current government routinely using parliamentary urgency to pass contentious legislation, what former prime minister Geoffrey Palmer called an 'executive paradise' also seems alive and well.", "The familiar 'ruling out' of compromise or possible coalition simply entrenches this. 'In effect,' Shaw writes, 'the absence of a genuinely moderate centre party has meant a return to the zero-sum politics of the pre-MMP era.'", "PS: We're grateful to all our New Zealand readers who've already contributed to our fundraising campaign. If you haven't yet and you value our work, you can join here. Thank you.", "Finlay Macdonald, New Zealand Editor", "NEW ZEALAND INTERNATIONAL SCIENCE FESTIVAL 28 June – 6 July 2025 Dunedin | Ōtepoti scifest.org.nz", "Today's newsletter supported by NZ International Science Festival", "THE CONVERSATION", "You're receiving this newsletter from The Conversation", "Po Box 5290, Waterloo Quay, Wellington 6140", "Forward to a friend · Unsubscribe".

The Daily Newsletter

Our daily newsletter (Monday - Friday) has an average open rate of 51.7% - more than double the industry rate that Campaign Monitor reports for newsletters in general (21.5%) and close to double for Media (23.9%).

Our click rate is also very high on links and articles in the newsletter – 9.2% compared to the industry rate of 2.3%.

What you get by becoming a sponsor:

- Two large click-through banners showcased in ad spots at the top and bottom of our newsletter.
- Your organisation credited as the sponsor of the newsletter.
- A post-campaign performance report (upon request).

The screenshot displays the layout of 'THE CONVERSATION' newsletter. At the top, it shows the newsletter title and date (2 September 2024). The main content area features an article about sex education with a quote from Judith Ireland, Education Editor. Two large sponsored banners are visible: one for 'FIRST NATIONS LEADERSHIP & ALLYSHIP SUMMIT' at the top and another for 'The Hatchery' at the bottom. The footer includes the newsletter title, contact information, and a disclaimer.

51.7% Open rate

204K People subscribed

The Weekender Newsletter

Don't want to read The Conversation everyday? We pull together the best articles of the week in this special Saturday newsletter.

What you get by becoming a sponsor:

- Two large click-through banners showcased in ad spots at the top and bottom of our newsletter.
- Your organisation credited as the sponsor of the newsletter.
- A post-campaign performance report (upon request).

47% Open rate

219K People subscribed

THE CONVERSATION

NAIDOC Week concludes this weekend, and there are sure to be events in your area celebrating local Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures.

Laura Case and Amanda Harris have written a lovely piece for us about the origins of NAIDOC Week in the late 1950s, and how arts and culture have always been central to the celebrations.

They take a look at the performances that took place at Sydney's NAIDOC Week in 1959, and the talent quest which followed from 1961. Big names like Jimmy Little and Candy Williams were joined by "gumleaf players", accordions and homemade instruments including one called "the broom drum, broom handle and two strings", they write.

The stage was a place for sharing of culture, and for building a sense of community – much like the performances at NAIDOC Week today. As Laura and Amanda write, "the history of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander NAIDOC Week is transforming a day of mourning born out of protest into a week of celebration brings home the ongoing relevance of NAIDOC."

If you're not able to get to any performances or events this weekend, there is still the opportunity to acknowledge NAIDOC Week at home with your family. Emerson Zerafa-Payne has compiled a lovely list of First Nations picture books to read with your children, this week and throughout the year. The list includes a beautiful explainer on Welcome to Country, as well as wonderful adventure stories that all children will find a connection to.

And finally, Stephanie Beaupark and Aneshka Mora have taken a look at a unique program at Wollongong Regional Art Gallery, HERE+NOW, which is working to give opportunities to First Nations and culturally diverse emerging curators and artists. The authors detail what this exhibition is trying to change in the art industry – and what your local galleries might be able to do to become more culturally inclusive.

Jane Howard
Arts + Culture Editor

BYRON WRITERS FESTIVAL 2024 from the ground up
FRI 09 – SUN 11 AUGUST
BYRONWRITERSFESTIVAL.COM

Today's newsletter supported by Byron Writers Festival

Identity and resilience: Aboriginal performers have been singing up the streets of Sydney for NAIDOC week since 1959
Laura Case, University of Sydney; Amanda Harris, University of Sydney

THE CONVERSATION

You're receiving this newsletter from The Conversation
Tenancy B, Level 5 700 Swanston Street Carlton VIC 3053
Forward to a friend • Unsubscribe

Science & Books & Ideas Newsletters

Science Newsletter

A weekly email of the best research and analysis from our science editors at The Conversation, each Tuesday.

Books & Ideas Newsletter

Every Friday we'll send you a weekly summary of books & ideas articles including the latest reviews and thought-provoking writing.

Contact: sponsor@theconversation.edu.au
to sponsor any of our newsletters.

"Sponsoring The Conversation's newsletters has been an invaluable marketing channel for our book releases and brand awareness campaigns. Placing our banner ads in front of a community that trusts the content they receive has allowed us to create a natural connection with their engaged readers."

- Fraser Holloway, Marketing & Sales Coordinator, Black Inc Books

Become a Trusted Sponsor

The Conversation only accepts partnerships with organisations that align with our values. Our audience trusts us, so becoming a sponsor means they will trust you.

We accept sponsorships from:

- Other not-for-profits or charities.
- University, research or government organisations
- Book publishers
- Arts organisations
- Ethical & environmentally-minded initiatives.

Contact: sponsor@theconversation.edu.au
to sponsor any of our newsletters.

Some of our sponsors..

Newsletter Sponsorship Rates

Newsletter	Rate
The Daily Newsletter	$900 per day
The Weekender Newsletter	$950 per day
Science Newsletter	$250 per day
Books & Ideas Newsletter	$200 per day
New Zealand Newsletter	$175 per day

*All rates are in NZD.

Receive a detailed post-campaign report to see how your ads performed (available upon request).

Newsletter Banner Specs & Guidelines

Ad specs

Top banner:

750px high by 900px wide

Bottom banner:

750px high by 900px wide

Both banners can be the same artwork or different.

*File formats: PNG or JPEG only.
No animated GIFS.

*Please note that banners are resized to 300px width when appearing on desktop.

Design Guidelines

- Minimum font size 24 points
- Logo minimum size 30 points
- Suggestion: no white or transparent background.
- Your banners will click-through to the URL that you provide to us, so it's a good idea to include a call to action button on your banners E.g “apply now”, “click here”, “find out more”.

The Conversation Job Board

The Conversation Job Board is a leading platform for academic, ethical and knowledge-sector jobs. Job ads are featured on rotation on our homepage and at the bottom of article pages as well as on the Job Board, so your listings are also visible to our millions of onsite users.

Job listings stay live for 30 days and include:

- Your organisation's logo to maximise branding.
- Links to your organisation's recruitment site to give applicants the most seamless experience.
- The personal attention of The Conversation's Job Board team for quality assurance.
- Easy to use dashboard - track your job's performance and repost or extend expiring job ads.

“When looking to attract new academic talent to our institution - the results of posting our appointments on The Conversation far exceeded my expectations”

- Professor Roland De Marco

Creating an employer account is easy and only takes a minute.

Click here

Job Board Rates & Discounts

Type	Rate	Savings
Single job	$390	$0
5 pack	$1,755	- $195
10 pack	$3,412.50	- $487.50
20 pack	$6,630	- $1,170
50 pack	$14,625	- $4,875
100 pack	$25,350	- $13,650

*All rates are in NZD.

Job packs never expire and will remain on your account until used.

Click here

Event, Course & Podcast Listings

Your event or course listing will be advertised on our NZ Event, Course & Podcast Board, on rotation on our homepage, and can feature in our daily newsletter.

- Promote upcoming events, lectures, symposiums, podcasts & online courses.
- Events & courses related to arts and culture (theatre, ballet, opera, music).
- Jobs and opportunities (Calls for papers, funding, submissions, articles and applications).

Just enter the details of your listing here and it will be listed on our site on that business day.

*All rates are in NZD.

“It's been a valuable way to get our events in front of a large but targeted audience that we otherwise wouldn't be able to reach.”

- Lisa Wheildon, ANZSOG

Rate

Free for member institutions or $340 for non-members.

Featured Listings

Boost your job ad, event, course or podcast listing to reach thousands more of our readers.

Boosting your listing means that it will be featured at the bottom of The Conversation NZ homepage for one week and in the New Zealand Weekly newsletter (17K subscribers).

Your event listing will also be featured on The Conversation's LinkedIn page (21.5K followers).

Rate

$150

*All rates are in NZD.

Featured Listings (How To)

To feature your job listing, simply select 'Featured Job' before submitting your job listing here.

To feature your event listing, please submit your listing here and then contact sponsor@theconversation.edu.au to book in dates.

THE CONVERSATION

Find us here:

Contact: sponsor@theconversation.edu.au